4 AMERICANS HAVE INCOMES IN EXCESS OF FIVE MILLIONS

Thirty-three Report On Earning Of More Than Million

OIL AND FLIVVERS

John D. And Henry Ford Wealthiest, Figures Show

(China Press Service)

Washington, Oct. 12.—Four persons reported individual incomes of $5,000,000 or more; four between four and five million; three between three and four million; three between one and a half and two million, and nineteen between one and one and a half million, a total of 33 incomes above the million dollar mark. This was announced by the Bureau of Internal Revenues.

One of the returns was made by a "single man," undoubtedly John D. Rockefeller, who is a widower. The other three were joint returns of husbands and wives.

Of the four, two were made by residents of New York State and two by residents of Michigan. The identity of those making the returns is not given. It is recognised, however, that Mr. Rockefeller is one of the New Yorkers. Admittedly, also, one of the great incomes from Michigan was returned by Henry Ford.

There are those who believe that both returns of $5,000,000 or more from Michigan were made by the Ford family, and that the second income of $5,000,000 from the State was returned by Mrs. Ford and his wife. Those who should know about the large fortunes of residents of Michigan are at a loss to make a better guess.

OTHER FIGURES

There were 25 who paid tax on between $750,000 and $1,000,000; 98 between $500,000 and $750,000; 405 between $250,000 and $500,000, and 3,088 between $100,000 and $250,000, a total of 3,616 with incomes running into six figures, yet not in the million dollar class.

In the class between $50,000 and $100,000 there were 12,093; between $25,000 and $50,000, 38,548, and between $10,000 and $25,000, 171,830, a total of 222,471 with incomes of five figures.

Between eighty-five and ten thousand there were 455,442; between four and five thousand, 894,559; between two and three thousand, 2,569,316, and between one and two thousand, 2,671,950. Of the incomes under $5,000 there were 1,741,634 non-taxable because of exemptions.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Joint returns by husbands and wives numbered 3,775,261; by men heads of families, 474,574; by women heads of families, 132,181; by single men, 2,256,565; by single women, 503,690; by wives making returns separately from husbands, 77,558, and community property returns, 40.

Income of $5,000,000 or more was reported by 160 corporations; 836 ranged from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, 1,142 from $500,000 to $1,000,000, 2,124 from $250,000 to $500,000, 7,092 from $50,000 to $100,000, 35,944 from $10,000 to $50,000; 27,616 from $5,000 to $10,000, 46,868 from $2,000 to $5,000, 75,905 up to $2,000.

Returns were filed by 12,432 resident and non-resident aliens and foreign corporations, reporting net income of $148,449,199, with tax of $21,065,882. There were 39,256 American citizens and corporations reporting foreign income of $177,474,765.

A Romantic Trek From The Land of The Midnight Sun Through The Heart Of Asia, The Fantastic Land of Mongolia, And Mysterious Thibet To Shanghai.

XIX—LAMA CEREMONIALS

By Larry Lehrlas

The Lama Church of Thibet, ruled with an iron hand by the Dalai Lama from his picturesque palace at Lhassa, the bizarre capital of a nomadic people on the roof of the world, observes in general the ceremonials and practices of the church which is a corrupted form of—Buddhism. The temples and lamaseries are filled with Buddhas, as are the temples and monasteries of China and Japan, and the ceremonials are conducted with the same beating of cymbals and gongs, the same weird chanting, the same division of worship among a hundred lesser gods than the Buddha himself.

To the elementary ceremonials of the Buddhist church the Tibetan lamas, however, have grafted barbaric and picturesque Devil Dances, prayer wheels with their "On mane padme hum" in Tibetan characters, and their strange and fantastic custom of 'burning the devils.' During their month's visit with the American missionary on the mystic Tibetan-Chinese frontier Serge and his two companions were given the opportunity of seeing several of the lama ceremonials through the knowledge of the Tibetan customs the missionary had gained from many years residence among them and knowledge of the language.

One day, on their rounds with the missionary, they came upon an enormous gathering of people congregated for the ceremony of 'burning the devils.' From every surrounding village of tents and from many individutents scattered about the tablelands the Tibetans and their wives and ponies and big mastiff dogs gathered on a wide stretch of plateau—the men dressed in their best clothes with their short swords inlaid with silver stuck in their belts, and an extra supply of buttered tea and tsamba, a parched barley meal, on their saddles for a snack at noon, the women in their best finery and embroidered headgear, the lamas in their brilliant red robes—a colorful and picturesque assemblage of a strange people.

'BURNING STRAW DEVILS'

The gathering was called by the lamas to drive out the devils, whom they asserted were responsible for the epidemic that had swept across the country and killed a large number of yak and horses during the Spring. Over 5,000 lamas from all the surrounding temples, lamaseries and tent villages were present to utter up one great concentrated prayer—and then burn the imitation devils.

In the center of the gathering was a hideous, fantastic 'devil' made of straw and wool. It reached a height of 25 or 30 feet, and was a conglomeration of all the hideousness the lamas could imagine. The idea prevalent was that the devils feared only one thing—fire, and so could be driven away only by fire. For four days the hundreds of lamas conducted their weird rites, reciting strange prayers, spinning prayer wheels containing thousands of printed prayers, chanting and singing prayers and otherwise calling on the good Buddh of creation to come and take a fall out of the bad devils. Music was furnished by dozens of lama horn-tooters, inner Asia's idea of the modernised jazz-hound. The horns they blew were 15 feet long and so heavy that another lama was required to hold the end from which the high pitched toots issued. The horns needed no magnavox amplifier.

Other lamas circulated among the crowd—which for four days did nothing but pursue a policy of watchful waiting—beating cymbals and gongs and clashing long strings of wooden and metal disks that ran the gamut from high pitched shrilling notes to low, booming echoes. Night and day for four days the ceaseless noises continued in a babble of prayers and shouted greetings—and then for two hours there was dead silence—a silence so profound after the hullabaloo it hurt the ears—while a messenger was sent to the Dalai Lama, the living, incarnation of Buddha at Lhassa.

During that two hours of silence a messenger from the chief priest in charge of the ceremonial went from the scene to Lhassa—a mere matter of a few hundred miles—and back, bringing with him word that the Grand Lama had transmitted his own personal prayers to the Buddha and that his prayers had turned the trick. They could now burn the devil and the cattle would be saved. Lamas immediately began a fantastic dance with torches, going through all the evolutions of Russian dancing and jazz combined, and then tossed their burning torches into the poor straw devil. A burst of blames that shot feet into the air, a puff of straw smoke—and

Fessenden, Dean Of American Lawyers, Has Anniversary

Mr. Stirling Fessenden, dean of American attorneys in China, who has been a leading figure in much of the important litigation in courts here for nearly two decades, completed seventeen years of activity as an attorney in Shanghai yesterday, Marking this notable anniversary Mr. Fessenden appeared yesterday in the unusual role a witness through the day in two cases that were heard by Judge Lobingier in the United States Court for China.

On the stand yesterday afternoon after routine preliminary questions the query was put:

"How long, Mr. Fessenden, have you been practicing law in Shanghai?"

"I was admitted to the bar seventeen years ago today." It was in this way that the exact period of Mr. Fessenden's long service was made known.

For many years Mr. Fessenden was a member of the firm of Jernigan and Fessenden, being associated through this period with the late Mr. T. R. Jernigan long the foremost American lawyers of the Far East. The firm of Fessenden and Holcomb is present day successor to this firm.

H. C. L. With New Meaning Features Trial Of Lawyers Suing To Recover Fees

Costs Of Litigation Set Forth In Testimony Of Attorneys In Case Of Rodger And Haskell Against A. T. Steele Who Was Client

High lights on what it costs to go to law—the H. C. L. with a new interpretation that reads the high cost of litigation—and an authoritative review of lawyers' charges—these are elements of a suit being heard by Judge C. S. Lobingier in the United States Court for China.

The case is an action filed by Mr. H. D. Rodger and Mr. R. S. Haskell, composing the firm of Rodger and Haskell, against Mr. A. T. Steele to recover the sum of Gold $1,792.54 alleged to be due for professional services and the hearing, involving an impressive array of legal talent, not only before the bar but in the witness chair as well, may conceivably work out in such fashion as to provide the man in the street with something in the nature of a union scale for attorneys.

From the time the trial opened in the morning until Judge Lobingier ordered an adjournment after 8 o'clock last night the testimony of lawyers and the clients of lawyers almost wholly was given over to questions relating to lawyers' fees for services of various kinds.

HISTORY OF CASE

In the action before court the plaintiff firm of attorneys alleges that it undertook to press a case at law on behalf of the defendant, Mr. Steele, on a contingent basis. The case was that of A. T. Steele against the American Trading Company which was tried in the American Court for China early in 1920. This was a suit for alleged breach of contract and wrongful dismissal and resulted in a judgment in favor of Mr. Steele in the sum of Gold $8,962.70, a judgment subsequently upheld by the Federal Court of Appeals in California.

Testifying yesterday Mr. Haskell said his firm had taken the case on a contingent basis as a result of preliminary arrangements he had made with Mr. Steele in Japan As those arrangements were conducted in Japan and claims involved then were being considered in terms of Japanese currency the agreement Mr. Haskell told of was reached in yen. It was agreed, Mr. Haskell said, that on the contingent basis fixed, his firm was receive for legal services five per cent of any sum recovered over Yen 2,500, 10 per cent of any sum over Yen 5,000, 15 per cent of any sum over Yen 10,000, and 20 per cent of any sum over Yen 15,000.

At the time this agreement was reached Mr. Steele was pressing his claim against the American Trading Company in Japan and Mr. Haskell said it was on his advice that Mr. Steel came to Shanghai and brought suit in the United States Court for China.

TELLS OF WORK DONE

Mr Haskell and Mrs. Rodger, who followed him as a witness told in detail of the preparations carried forward for the trial of the case and of the work done in connection with it, relating also of the manner in which Mr. Stirling Fessenden had been engaged by Mr. Steele to act. Mr. Haskell said his first knowledge that Mr. Fessenden had been employed came from Mr. Fessenden himself. Mr. Fessenden, he said, had declined to act in the case without complete consent of Messrs. Rodger and Haskell and Mr. Haskell said his firm had been glad to give this consent.

In conflict with the testimony that Mr. Haskell had given Mr. Steele, who was the last witness heard, declared that no definite percentage of any probable judgment as a contingent fee ever had been agreed to by him either with Mr. Haskell in Japan or subsequently with the firm of Rodger and Haskell. He admitted that he had given the case to Rodger and Haskell on a contingent basis, but said the exact terms were not fixed in Japan, but were left to be arranged later in Shanghai.

MR. FESSENDEN CALLED

After his arrival in Shanghai Mr. Steele said he had been asked for a fee of retainer of Tls. 250, which he said he considered to be contrary to the arrangement he had made with Mr. Haskell and in some measure by reason of this he had then employed Mr. Fessenden to act in the case.

Though other attorneys including Mr. Tycho Wing had been called as witnesses in the course of the hearing and had testified on the general subject of fees and charges perhaps the most enlightening views in this connection were those expressed by Mr. Stirling Fessenden. After he had been engaged in the case Mr. Fessenden had done a portion of the work of preparation, had appeared at the various hearings and after judgment had been given in the court here, without assistance of Rodger and Haskell, had taken the case on to the Court of Appeals where the judgment was affirmed.

It was disclosed that Mr. Fessenden had charged a fee of Tls. 750, but on this point he testified that if he had been solely in charge of the case he would have made a charge of from Tls. 1,500 to Tls. 2,000 and he said he had fixed his fee to conform with the circumstance that another firm of attorneys had been employed and in consideration of circumstances pertaining to the client.

Mr. Fessenden gave the view that a fee of Tls. 2,000 for handling the case in question was not unreasonable in his opinion.

The hearing is to be resumed this morning and it is probable that it will be submitted before the end of the morning session of court.

New York, Nov. 1.—A statement issued by Mr. Henry Werblow through his counsel declares that he and his brother Robert were the victims of an international band of criminals who conceived the plan of swindling the Guaranty Trust Company through the Asia Banking Corporation by a system of forged telegrams passing between China, London and New York. Mr. Werblow explains that the forged cables led him to believe that his brother was implicated and he declares that it was his efforts to protect his brother and save the Bank which led to his arrest.

The President of the Asia Banking Corporation informs Reuter that Mr. Werblow returned voluntarily from Peking and that he was not lured to America as previously stated.

Captain Liu Tao-yi, C. N., instructor of the Nanyuan Aviation School, passed away at his home, 76 Si Ling Road, West Gate, yesterday following a brief illness of scarlet fever. Burial will take place today. He is survived by the widow and one son.

Captain Liu, a native of Wusih, was lent to the Aeronautical Department by the Ministry of the Navy when General Mouhan K. Ting was director of the department and was sent to study aviation in the Philippine Islands, where he completed a course in flying at the Curtis School of Aviation.

Upon returning to China last year, Captain Liu was immediately given a pilot's license by the Aeronautical Department and had since been considered as one of the best fliers that China has produced.

Last month Captain Liu obtained leave of absence from the Aeronautical Department on account of the indisposition of his wife and came to Shanghai to make a short stay. While here several flattering offers were made to him by various provincial governments to join their air services, but these he declined.

BODY ADVISES CITY'S CONTROL OF WATERWORKS

Special Committee Turns In Report To Council

Expressing the opinion that no really satisfactory settlement is at all probable between the Municipal Council and the Shanghai Waterworks Company in the negotiations for extension and improvement of supply on the one hand and increased and differently assessed rates on the other, the Special waterworks Committee has unanimously declared itself in favor of municipal control and ownership of this public utility system.

The finding of the committee is contained in today's Municipal Gazette and the recommendation made is that, subject to financial considerations—into which phase the committee was not able to go owing to absence of data—action should be taken by the Council at an early date to exercise municipal control and ownership.

In the minutes of the Council meeting at which the report was presented it is stated that as regards its formal submission to the ratepayers, members of the Council consider that inasmuch as tentative negotations for purchase of the Waterworks Company's undertaking have been already opened, no particular advantage would accrue from the calling of a special ratepayers' meeting, particularly as it is doubtful whether the necessary attendance could be obtained. Under the circumstances it was decided to hold over submission of the report until the next annual meeting.

COUNCIL SCORES TRAM COMPANY ON REPAIR WORK

"Patchwork Methods" Unsatisfactory; Whole System Needs Reconstruction

The Shanghai Tramways Company's maintenance of tram tracks comes in for a scoring by the Municipal Council in today's Municipal Gazette.

The Council's comment follows on discussion of recently undertaken repair work which had been the subject of communications between the Municipality and the company. The repair work was carried out, but the Council states that except in one instance—on Broadway East—it was extremely unsatisfactory, since the repairs were of a temporary nature.

"Under these circumstances," the minute of the Council meeting states, "it is decided to address the company stating that its patchwork methods are regarded as unsatisfactory, that it is considered that the whole rail system requires reconstruction, that plans and particulars of the program which the company proposes to undertake in this connection are desired, and finally that the council would afford every facility possible in the matter of deviation of traffic or the provision of temporary tracks on routes that require reconstrection, in order to speed up the work."

MUSSOLINI'S FIRST ACT IS TO PUT ROLLERS UNDER IDLERS

Extraordinary Enthusiasm As Fascisti Enter Capital

(Reuter's Service)

Rome, Oct. 31.—One of Signor Mussolini's first acts when he took over his Ministerial duties unusually early this morning was to ascertain that State employees were observing punctuality. Otherwise he ordered their dismissal as unworthy to serve the State. The new Premier donned a newly-ordered ready-made frock-coat and a top hat before proceeding to the Quirinal where he presented the King with a frank statement on conditions in Italy. His Majesty then read the oath of office which Signor Mussolini solemnly took, giving the characteristic Fascisti salute, copied from the ancient Romans.

Rome, Oct. 31.—Signor Mussolini telegraphing greetings to Mr. Bonar Law and M. Poincare on his assumption of the Premiership declares that solidarity of the Allies is indispensable for effectiveness of political action. He telegraphed in a similar manner to Mr. Hughes, the United States Secretary of State, expressing confidence in mutual friendly, economic and spiritual collaboration.

Extraordinary scenes of enthusiasm marked the march through Rome of the 15,000 Fascisti, clad in their famous black shirts, and several thousand blue-shirted Nationalists. The streets were decorated and flowers were rained on the processionists, who, after filing past and reverently saluting the Unknown Soldier's tomb, proceeded to the Quirinal Square where 100,000 people were assembled. His Majesty came out and was received with tumultuous cheering. The men then re-formed and were despatched to their homes on fifty special trains, prior to their demobilisation.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 31.—The Italian newspapers publish the text of telegrams exchanged between Signor Mussolini and Signor d'Annunzio. Signor d'Annunzio recommends the postponement of the elections until next spring to permit the Government to prepare the bases for national reconstruction.

Mussolini Has Talk With The King

(Reuter's Service)

Rome, Oct. 31.—Signor Mussolini's first words on being granted an audience by the King yesterday were:

"I must apologise for appearing before Your Majesty in a black shirt."

He added that he wished to present himself as a representative of the national movement which had overthrown all obstacles in order to reconstruct the country "for which purpose I am Your Majesty's obedient servant."

The King and Signor Mussolini then shook hands, pledging themselves to work together for the greatness of Italy.

Signor Mussolini has ordered only 15,000 "black shirts" to enter Rome today to pay homage to the King and tribute to the "Unknown Warrior."

The streets yesterday, however, were swarming with Fascisti, fraternising with the troops. There was a fight between Fascisti and Communists in the Siburtino quarter, according to the papers, which say that eight persons were killed and several injured.

There were stirring scenes of enthusiasm on the occasion of the 15,000 uniformed Fascisti marching in procession along the main thoroughfares of Rome today.

The Fascista High Command has ordered the demobilisation of the Fascisti. The numerous Fascisti now in Rome will proceed to their homes after the patriotic procession this evening.

The situation in Italy is now regarded as normal.

Mussolini Cabinet Takes Office Oath

(Reuter's Service)

Rome, October 31.—Signor Mussolini's Government took the oath today.

(China Press Service)

Rome, Oct. 31.—All Italy with exception of the dwindling camp of the extreme radicals—communists, reds and "riff-raff," as they are called in various quarters—is rejoicing over the Fascisti victory. Newspapers generally are praising the moderation of Signor Mussolini in granting his defeated opponents the majority of places in the cabinet, but this it is definitely understood is to be only during their good conduct which, epitomised, means co-operation.

As stated in a previous dispatch, Signor Mussolini's program is the regeneration of Italy's national and industrial life along the lines of safety for life and property and in this connection, the Fascisti victory constitutes the greatest setback that has been given Bolshevism since that devoring spectre reared its head in Russia to spread industrial unrest throughout all Europe.

The Fascisti deny both the right and the ability of the "proletariat" to rule, and in this connection it may be pointed out that the utter inability of the labor elements to restrain themselves and be moderate was one of the main motives for the formation of the Fascisti.

Local Italians Explain Situation

Exposition of the events leading up to the formation of the Fascisti and its culminating victory was furnished yesterday by several well known Italian businessmen in Shanghai, all of whom expressed themselves as in full sympathy with the objects of the society and its method in carrying them out.

To begin with, the name of the society goes back to Roman days when the "axe and fasces," a bundle of faggots from which the edge of an axe projected, was carried in processions as an emblem of the judicial authority. Some have traced the idea of the bundle of sticks to the fable of Aesop regarding the family which could be broken individually, but not when tied in a bundle. Both of these ideas is contained in the name of the Fascisti who not only are bound together as a unit, but who have taken parts of the "high, low and middle" justice into their hands.

The Fascisti combine was formed soon after the war when labor began to revolt, taking over factories that they could not manage and otherwise playing hob with everything they touched. The Fascisti membership is composed of those who belong neither to the aristocracy nor to the labor organisations, and are the class which first felt the pinch of industrial unrest, the bourgeosie, composed of professional men, manufacturers, merchants, and the like.

Beginning in a small way, the idea of combining against the communistic tendencies of the day gradually grew and the Fascisti gathered strength. The first great test came this year, when the Milan labor unions decided that May 1 must be a full holiday. They posted proclamations stating that all railways, trams, light and power services would stop that day.

The Fascisti replied that for every man that went out on a May Day strike, they would provide two volunteers to take over the work. The result was that Milan enjoyed all the activities of a city and the Labor Party got a black eye among its own members, the more moderate of whom joined the Fascisti.

If it has a motto, the Fascisti slogan is "fight fire with fire." The Government was restricted to purely legal processes in combating the communists, but the society not at all. When the communists burned a factory, the Fascisti gathered in force and proceeded to dynamite the house of every communist leader. They announced that any lives lost in sabotage by communists would be paid for by the lives of the head men of the communists.

Then came the August proclamation of the Laborites that a general strike was to be called on all railways. This the Fascisti met by counter proclamations calling its men to arms. As the communists were mostly the non-combatants of the war, and the laborites had no skill in the handling of weapons, other than the furtive dynamite and hidden wreckers planted in industrial plants, the willingness of the Fascisti to fight called a pause on the strike, and when the Government posted a proclamation thanking the Fascisti for averting the stoppage of rail traffic, the more sensible among the labor men flocked into the Fascisti camp in thousands.

Dissatisfied at the manner in which the government was being carried on, deeming it destructive of Italy's prestige abroad, the Fascisti resolved upon the coup which they have carried out so successfully that according to the news reports of Tuesday, the Communists have been practically obliterated as a factor in Italian national life.

The Incomparable Pavlowa Opens Season Here Tonight

Famous Russian Dancer And Big Company To Begin Ten-Night Engagement At Olympic

Anna Pavlowa, the "Incomparable," greatest of the Russian dancers, opens her season at the Olympic Theater tonight, coming to Shanghai after a series of artistic triumphs in Japan.

Madame Pavlowa and her large company of artists arrived here yesterday by the steamer Nikko Maru and the inauguration of her season at the Olympic this evening will stand out as a red letter date in the records of artistic entertainment in Shanghai.

In Japan, which the famous Russian classical dancer left on October 30, the critics went into ecstacies over the programs presented, and particularly over the appearances of Pavlowa herself. Her supporting company is large and of front rank ability and the repertoire is one which has evoked the higher praise from metropolitan critics all over the world.

The program for tonight, as indicated in previous announcements from the management, will consist of "Amarillo," "Chopiniana" and divertissments, including the "Sivan."

Pavlowa and her band of artists expect to play a ten-night engagement in Shanghai and advance bookings indicate that there will scarcely be a vacant seat in the house on any night during the stay. The famous dancer is brought out to the East by Mr. Strok, Russian impresario who is responsible for Shanghai being favored by a number of great artists, including Mischa Elman, Zimbalist and others.

National Liberals Near Party Split

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 1.—The National Liberals held a counsel of war all day yesterday but failed to reach a decision regarding their relationship to the Conservatives, who, up to the present, are opposing 30 National Liberal candidates including four ex-Ministers. The followers of Mr. Lloyd George are very reluctant to declare war and will probably wait a day or two to see whether the hostile movement on the part of their former colleagues extends before taking a decision. In the meantime, Mr. Winston Churchill, who is rapidly convalescing, has written to his constituents warmly attacking the new Government's policy.

The breach between the followers of Mr. Austen Chamberlain and the orthodox Conservatives has been considerably healed in the past few days but a few like Lord Birkenhead and Sir Robert Horne are apparently swinging towards Mr. Lloyd George.

the devil was reduced to feathery straw-ash heap while all the lamas and assembled worshippers kowtowed three times with prayers.

DANCE OF THE DEVILS

Two or three hundred lamas wearing masks then paraded into the open air amphitheater and performed the "Dance of the Devils." The masks were huge, grotesque affairs in rainbow colors—bulging eyes and enormous, elephantine ears, horns and whatnots. The dance they did was a weird series of steps and kangaroo hops, interspersed with prances and gallops, twists and turns, gyrations and spins. As they finished they each gathered a handful of ashes from the burned devil and tossed them into bags on the backs of two camels. That same night the camels began the long caravan trek to Lhassa to deliver the ashes at the feet of the Grand Lama himself.

On another day the cadets went with the missionary to watch the spectacle of silent prayers being offered at the largest Buddha they saw throughout their travels. It stood—or rather squatted on a gigantic lotus leaf—more than fifty feet in the air and was studded with glistening stones—reds, blues, greens, purples—which the lamas declared were precious stones—and high among the rafters of the temple were strings of bells that tingled with the passing of every vagrant breeze. About it were hundreds of scarlet candles and hangings decorated with golden Tibetan characters, and all the other essentials of picturesqueness to be seen in Chinese temples and shrines.

LASSOING WILD HORSES

Just before leaving the missionary the three cadets went on one of the most exciting expeditions of their weary months across Mongolia and inner Asia—a wild horse hunt. With the missionary and a dozen members of his semi-Christianised flock they set out early one morning mounted on the swiftest ponies the village afforded. Just before dawn they reached a saltine lake where the wild horses trotted each morning to munch the grass about the lake and prance and roll a bit in the muddy marshlands. After waiting an hour or so hidden in the tall grass one of the guides announced in a stage whisper that a small band of ponies were approaching and the horse-catchers gripped their lassoes—long, slender poles with a buckskin lasso on the end—and prepared to jump on their ponies as soon as the wild broncos stopped and began nibbling at the grass.

Suddenly and swiftly, and without hardly a sound the Tibetans and Mongolians hopped onto their ponies and rode at breakneck speed toward the grazing band. One—the leader of the wild band—caught their odor and was off with a frightened neigh to the other ponies and a kick of his heels. Serge had followed suit to the best of his ability and was only a second behind when the first horsemen whirled their lassos and brought their first ponies to a halt.

Serge, as much as he had become hardened to riding during the preceding months, had never before attempted to capture a wild pony with the whip-lasso. He flung the lasso out, the small buckskin holder taunt about his wrist. The loop fell over the fleeing ponies head. Nothing happened for a moment—and about five minutes afterward Serge awoke with a throbbing head and a special pain on his dome that in the course of a few minutes developed into a beautiful goose-egg. The wild tableland broncos, it appeared, were not caught when the loop fell over their heads, but must be thrown to the ground and held. The other hunters captured 12 wild ponies.

In tomorrow's installment of the 'Yak Tail Trails', which concludes the series, the three young cadets turn away from the Tibetan borderland and enter China near the headwaters of the Yangtzse, and down to Shanghai.

Testimony Is Concluded In Fischer-Stone Realty Case

Witnesses Of Intervening Claimant Tell Of Loans Maid By Reids, Ltd Compradore

Taking of testimony in the suit of Emil S. Fischer against Charles Stone, trial of which opened on Tuesday, was concluded yesterday in the United States Court for China before Judge Charles S. Lobingier. In the action former Judge C. R. Williams and Mr. C. S. Franklin of the firm of Williams, Franklin and Faison are appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. J. B. Davies of Davies and Bryan is appearing for Mr. Y. C. Woo in connection with an intervening action while Mr. Stone, the defendant, is not represented by counsel.

The suit is based upon involved claims to the title to certain property on Burkill Road, growing out of a mortgage deed that Fischer alleges was given in his favor in the sum of Tls. 10,000 by his former wife, who has since remarried. It has been disclosed in testimony that the title of the property was transferred by the former Mrs. Fischer to Mr. Stone, defendant in the action and he in turn used it as security for advances received from Mr. Woo when the latter was compradore of Reids Ltd. and Mr. Stone was manager of that firm, which now is bankrupt. Mr. Woo's intervening petition is based on claims in connection with the advances made on the security of the property.

The first witness called yesterday morning was Mr. H. G. King, the American vice consul who is in charge of the land office of the consulate. He testified to the regular proceedure in the registration of titles of property in Shanghai and stated that the land office records showed clearly that the deed executed by the Danish consulate on Feb. 1, 1922 contained no mention of a mortgage encumbrance and that therefore after the property had been remeasured, according to the Chinese statutes provided for that a deed was issued by the American Consulate here on June 1, 1921 as being free and clear of all incumbrances. The first intimation that he received that there was a mortgage claimed on the property was when on Nov. 18, 1921 he received a letter from the Danish acting consul stating that the property was encumbered with a mortgage in the name of Charles Emmiline Fischer of Tls. 10,000 bearing interest at the rate of 5%.

Mr. Sterling Fessenden who was the next witness called by the defendant told of his conversations with his client Mr. Y. C. Woo regarding the acceptance of a declaration of Trust in lieu of a deed to the property on Burkhill road which Mr. Stone had offered as security in the compradore's agreement made with Mr. Woo for Tls. 40,000. Mr. Fessenden stated that he had looked up the title for the property as registered in the land office of the American Consulate and when he found that to all intents and purposes it was free of incumbrances he advised his client to accept it as security. He believed the transactions occurred during the month of March 1921.

The next witness called by the defendant was Mr. Y. C. Woo the Chinese compradore of Reid's Ltd who has also filed a claim of intervention in the present case. After reviewing the history of his employment with Reid's Ltd. he stated that he advanced all told approximately Tls. 61,000 to his employers. In addition to the deed to the property which he received some four months after the Declaration of Trust previously mentioned, Mr. Woo said that he had accepted additional security comprising wine and liquors which he had sold to Giesel and Company for $18,000. However since much of this wine was spurious Mr. Albert Giesel was now suing him to recover $12,000 which was the estimated amount of the spurious wine.

Regarding the rents accruing from the property on Burkill road which he held in Trust, Mr. Woo said that he had not received one cent of revenue inasmuch as it was specified in his contract that he was only to receive "native" interest which would be paid by Mr. Stone. Asked by Judge Lobingier whether or not he had filed his claim for indemnification with the receivers in bankruptcy for Reid's Ltd., he stated that he already had filed such a claim through his attorney.

After the taking of testimony had been concluded Judge Lobingier made a brief resume of the case and said that inasmuch as it was very important since it involved the transfer of realty in Shanghai he hoped that both lawyers would submit as complete briefs as possible, being particularly careful to make exact references when quoting from legal authorities and precedents. He said that he would receive the plaintiff's brief of November 15, and the defendant's on November 28.

Thief Who Tried To Slay His Friend Gets Five-Year Sentence

For attempting to murder a friend who sought to turn him from ways divergent to those laid down in the Chinese Provisional Criminal Code a coolie named Tsou Ah-nyi was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by the Mixed Court yesterday.

The complainant in the case, Hyi Hung-san, testified that he had known the accused for some years and that previously he had an honest coolie. Latterly, however, he had turned to thieving, and complainant had done his best to bring him back to ways of righteousness, finally threatening to give information to the police. This had moved his erstwhile friend to anger and on the night of October 17 the latter had come into the alleyway off Woosung Road in which Hyi was sleeping and dropped a huge slab of concrete on his head.

A youth named Wong Ah-nyoh testified that he was lying in the alleyway at the time, only "a few inches" from Hyi. He had one eye open and the other closed, he said. The accused came into the alleyway three times and walked around his victim. On the last visit he took the stone and dropped it, from a height of about four feet, upon Hyi's head.

The accused admitted that Hyi had tried to get him to give up thieving, but denied that he had tried to murder the supplicant. He had merely walked into the alleyway—in which he, too, was accustomed to sleep—and had inadvertently kicked the slab of concrete, which was leaning against the wall. It had fallen and struck Hyi on the head. After kicking the stone, he said, he had seated himself and eaten food, afterward noticing that Hyi was injured.

HOW TO "GROW" A NEW COMPLEXION

These are the days of "bustling." In a week we see and do more than our grandmothers did in a year. We are gradually turning nature to be our servant: we use her great forces against herself. We have conquered sea and sky, now our doctors are fighting not only disease, rejuvenating human beings by the injection of animal glands but as yet, only the few can avail themselves of the treatment.

There is, however, one secret of perpetual youth that is in the reach of everyone. Scientists now realise that the only way of keeping the skin young and fresh is to examine Nature's methods and to find some way of imitating her.

In order to explain the new method of keeping the complexion perpetually youthful, one must understand something of the nature of the skin. A baby's skin is always clear and smooth because the outer layer is always invisibly peeling off, and new layers are forming just as fast underneath, so that the exposed skin is always fresh, unwrinkled and "new."

For the first few years of our lives this peeling is a purely natural process, but as we grow older, we gradually lose the power of throwing off our old soiled outer skins, so that our complexions become lined and yellow, and the new skin has no chance to show itself.

A few years ago, a scientific chemist realised that a little-known substance called mercolised wax, was exactly what was needed to "keep nature up to the mark." It appears that this substance, which is now universally obtainable gently and painlessly assists nature in throwing off the soiled outer cuticle. The skin is thus perpetually renewed, and its clear youthful complexion can be preserved to any age. (Advt.)

DR. HAWKS POTT GIVES LECTURE ON ENVIRONMENT

Speaking on the subject "Heredity and Environment," Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott, of St. John's University, delivered an interesting lecture last evening before the Young Men's Hebrew Association, the first in a series of fifteen discourses arranged by that organisation.

The meeting was presided over by Rabbi Hirsch and was largely atended. The speaker divided his subject into five parts: a description of heredity, a description of environment, the comparative importance of the two factors, the control of heredity and the control of environment. With each of these sub-divisions he dealt comprehensively. The doctrine that heredity determines everything the speaker regarded as a most depressing and pessimistic teaching, which would make all men merely automata and would preclude any change from the character with which one might be born. Environment he described as furnishing the stimuli of life. Heredity might be designated nature, and environment, nurture.

In drawing conclusions, Dr. Hawks Pott held that those who advocate the improvement of heredity and those who advocate improvement of environment should work with one another, because both factors are important, as important for human progress as the "legs for locomotion."

FATHER SHIFTS RESPONSIBILITY TO SON IN SUIT

An interesting case involving the issue of jurisdiction was heard in the Mixed Court yesterday morning when a suit by Messrs. Harvie, Cooke and Co., against C. H. and C. T. Tong of Broadway, to recover $4,000 for alleged non-delivery of goods, came to trial.

Dr. Fischer appeared for C. T. Tong, whom the plaintiff alleged was the proprietor of the shop. Dr. Fischer moved the Court to strike out the name of his client as he had ceased to be a partner in the firm when many years ago he divided his estate among his children. The other defendant was his son and one of the partners, but he was a Portuguese citizen.

Mr. M. B. Brown, who apeared for Messrs. Harvie, Cooke and Co., submitted that the father had given the impression that he was still connected with the firm, and submitted that it was a serious question as far as foreign firms in Shanghai were concerned.

Assessor Blackburn said he could not change the Chinese law on the matter and advised the plaintiffs to sue the other defendant in the Portuguese Consular Court, and ordered the name of the father to be struck off as a defendant.

Both of these pleaded that they were now by way of being honest boatmen and that on the night they were arrested it was raining and things were so disagreeable aboard ship that they had come ashore solely for the purpose of spending the night comfortably in a lodging house.

Another of the gang was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, one to thirteen months and the rest to terms ranging upward from four months.

London, Nov. 1.—Using an improvised armored car as cover for the purpose of laying mines to blow up the barracks, a strong column of irregulars on Sunday attacked the Clifden Garrison. The latter held out for ten hours until the barracks were on fire when they were compelled to emerge and surrender. The garrison of the trans-Atlantic wireless station, which thus became untenable, strenuously tried to relieve the town but were compelled to retreat to Galway. Several persons were killed and wounded on both sides. Eighty National soldiers were taken prisoners.

Ulster Speakers To Stump In England

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 31.—One hundred and fifty of the 300 Ulstermen delegated to participate in the election have landed at Liverpool and will be distributed in batches of ten in London and other cities.

They bring a statement from Sir James Craig declaring that it is incumbent on Ulster to resist the revision of boundaries which Mr. Lloyd George promised Sinn Fein and seeking the assurances of British Parliamentary candidates that the new Government will safeguard Ulster's interests.

Liddell Godown Damaged By Fire

Four Chinese buildings were slightly damaged and a large amount of cotton owned by Liddell Bros. was damaged in fires early yesterday morning. The Yangtszepoo division was called to Birch wharf, 29 Yangtszepoo Road, at 6:13 a.m. and found smoke pouring from the first three floors of a godown filled with baled cotton and cotton waste owned by Liddell Bros. Gas masks had to be worn because of the excessive smoke, and it was probably due to the fact that the godown was fitted with a sprinkler system that the entire contents were not destroyed. The damage to the building is not large but considerable damage was done to the cotton by water.

The Central division was called to a fire at Peking and Kweichow Roads at 12:03 a.m. yesterday where a second hand shop at V-680 Peking Road, was on fire, kept the flames from spreading Splendid work by the department after their arrival.

BAER SAYS "BUGS" Baer:

THAT OLD SWEET ALFALFA MAKER

Fight Fans Love The Fighters With The Heavy Hands

Plenty people went up to the Velodrome to pipe Bobby Barrett's over-capitalised right swing.

Barrett is sole lessee and owner of an ambitious wallop that would knock the Statue of Liberty loose from her torch.

If it landed. It starts out in life as a swing. Finishes as a swing. Charley White has no trouble oozing under it. Then Charley started feeding Bobby some imported Chicago swings.

Fighters with that consolidated venom in their gloves are the boys who pull the gates. If there is anything fight students love to see it's one of those ring-around-the-rosy slams that start from the nickel seats and knock the other candidate for a cable message.

Funny thing about those hay choppers. They're just as much fun when they miss as when they land. The boys on the hard wooden seats get fat chirping about a wallop that misses so hard it cools off the arena.

The meanest wallop we ever saw landed was established down in Washington, in Ned McLean's stable. Ned didn't know it but two newspapermen whose appetites never caught up to food promoted his stable for a grudge fight between two of his colored hostlers.

The fighters trained on nothing but hate.

Sixteen bills were realised from the sale of tickets. It was about ten years ago and we guess that Ned's stable is a garage now, anyway.

The guy with the heaviest grudge promised to knock the other citizen so cold his body would keep a year. But while he was sparring around like a cat with wet feet, the other neighbor's child smacked him all over his mouth with a right flotilla of knuckles.

It sounded like a bass drum factory exploding. Enough teeth flew around to supply all of this year's new Elks with watch charms.

The shock knocked Congressmen's feet off their desks, rattled the chimes in granfather's clocks, turned checks sour on their way to banks, and when Washington woke up the next morning, General Grant's statue was wearing a sailor hat that belonged on [illegible] aught.

That was some punch.

Amateur Status Of Golfers Defined

A rather important golf controversy has been settled by the following addition to the clauses hitherto existing for the definition of an amateur.

It says that an amateur golfer is one who has not "because of his skill as a golfer received, after December 31, 1922, a salary or remuneration, either directly or indirectly from any firm dealing in goods relating to the playing of the game."

It is also added that "the acceptance without payment of golf merchandise will render a player ineligible to compete in the amateur championship."

The questions now brought to a head have been simmering for years, and the championship committee resolved at last that they should be settled.

Apparently amateur golfers who, "because of their skill as golfers," hold appointments in firms dealing in goods used in the playing of the game are to be given until the end of the present year in which to decide whether they will resign those appointments or be debarred from taking part in the amateur championship.

The new clause applies at present only to this latter event, although doubtless it will be adopted in many cases by the committees controlling other open amateur tournaments.

If the players concerned decide to remain in their appointments, they will be in a sense neither amateurs nor professionals, for a professional is defined explicitly as "any player who has played for a money prize or has received payment for playing or teaching the game."

Hugh Scott Mitchell, a boy of 15, belonging to Sandwich, Kent, won the boy's golf championship on the Royal Ascot Course recently.

He has apparently been very carefully trained all his short life, since he shows none of the defects of most boy players.

PONIES SHOW GOOD FORM AT FIRST COOL WEATHER GALLOP

BY THE TOUT

It was the first nippy morning we have had this training, the grass course was entirely opened, there was no fog thank goodness, and the gallops were distinctly good. Those, however, that did their work before 7 a.m. had the best of it, for after that hour a strong northwesterly cutting wind arose, which hampered the ponies in their finishing quarter.

I was glad to see Mr. J. M. Dickenson, a Steward of the Tientsin Race Club, and a successful owner at their last meeting in [illegible] also Mr. Petersen, a Steward of the Peking Race Club. Bob Stewart was also down, and in the saddle, and if he is as successful as he was at Tientsin, the rose jacket should have a good meeting. I saw The Hawk on the course with Billy up cantering, but though not lame, he was showing sign of stiffness.

Of the Leger ponies, I must again signal out Sunstar who was the first of these candidates to gallop in the early morning. He did a mile and a quarter in 2.50.3, with a last quarter in 32, last half 1.43 and last three quarters in 1.41. Oregon's waistcoat must have been unbottoned, for he unshipped his rider, Mr. Crokam, directly he got onto the grass course. Though the jockey was unhurt, he refused to ride the pony again and so the riderboy took him over the distance in 2.51.1, last quarter 33 with his nose in the air. Crowborough started at a funeral's pace, but came the last three quarters in 1.37.2 with a last quarter in 33. He could not have done better, as his intermediate quarter, from the half mile post to the quarter, was done in 31. The Peregrine disappointed too, for he could not do better than 2.51.2 with a last quarter in 32.2, his companion, The Magpie, winning by a neck. I was disappointed in not seeing the other two favorites out, Christmas Card and Colorado, as we could then have guaged the form of all four; as it is I must wait to the bitter end to give my finals. I hear these two are galloping tomorrow.

I had no intention of referring to the Subs again as I have got quite fed up with them, but as Peterkins was made a hot favorite last Saturday at the lotteries, I had my optic on him today. Well, all I can say is, if he is placed, he will be lucky, and I still stick to Paddington as the best of a rotten bunch.

Of the old ponies, Old Bill was all there, and eclipsed all the mile and a quarter gallops in 2.48.4, with a last quarter in 32.4, last half 1.6, last three quarters in

Detective's Action Scored In Mixed Court Judgment

A decision of interest and importance was that handed down by Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Yui of the Mixed Court late Tuesday in sentencing a Municipal Chinese detective to two months' imprisonment on charges of illegal arrest and detention and assault preferred by a Chinese shop employe.

Briefly, the charge was that complainant was taken into custody by two detective's "seconds" without any warrant, was taken to a tea shop on Shanghaikwan Road and there examined and beaten by the accused.

The Court's decision was as follows:

"The consideration of this case has given the Court a great deal of anxiety for the issues raised are important. The charge is one of wrongful arrest and assault by a Police officer, and we are extremely sorry to say that we have to find that the charges are made out and that the accused is guilty. There can be no possible doubt that when the detectivq found that he could not himself get hold of the suspicious characters who were hanging around the Ta Wong Miao, he told his seconds to get hold of them and bring them to him and that the two complaining witnesses were in fact seized and brought to the tea house and placed before the detective. We have even to go further and to find that the detective did strike them. We feel we cannot find justly otherwise.

"Now we are well aware that tea shops are in China a regular place to the persons resorting for the discussion of every matter and the settlement of every discord, but we cannot admit that it is the right place for a detective to hold an inquiry or to establish identification. The proper place is the Police station, and the closer detectives stick to the Police station where their actions are supervised and controlled the better for every one. On the subject of the arrest it is not the policy of this or any other Court to put such obstacles in the way of the Police as to render the detection and arrest of guilty persons impossible. Where a crime has been committed and where a Police officer in the course of his inquiries finds some one he honestly thinks may have been implicated and that person avoids investigation and seems likely to escape altogether we have no hesitation in saying he may arrest him but he must do it himself and cannot do it by a deputy, and unless he decided to release the prisoner on the spot he must take him not to a teahouse but to the station. There was a warrant out for the arrest of 'Foo Tung.' Had the accused by himself or with other police officers arrested the complainants and taken them to the Police station for identification having some reason to believe that they were the persons named on the warrant no one would have had anything to say.

"On the subject of detective seconds there is no reason whatever why a detective should not have a dozen seconds if he wants to, providing that they are only the eyes and ears of the detective and not his hands and arms. They can bring him information but they have no authority whatever to lay a finger on a person except in the circumstances where any citizen has that authority. And a detective has no right whatever to sit down in a tea shop and send out his satellities to bring any one before him.

"The whole proceeding is, by Western standards, a gross excess of authority. In assessing punishment we have to take into consideration the fact that the accused has given many years of excellent service to the community, that he was in the present instance not in the advancement of any private interest but in the investigation of a crime and that owing to the protracted nature of this Court proceeding he has been kept in a state of agony of mind which has clearly reflected on his health. We therefore sentence him only to two months imprisonment."

In view of the health of the accused, Mr. Goldring asked whether the Court would consider a fine.

Mr. Blackburn said if the Police medical officer stated that the accused was too ill to serve the sentence the Court would consider the matter.

American Cotton Crop Not To Exceed 10,000,000 Bales

(Reuter's Service)

New York, October 6.—The impression made upon the minds of cotton traders by the Government crop report this week was that it would be useless to figure on a total production of much over ten million bales this season. What price such a yield would justify is problematical. Much will depend upon the ability of Europe to buy our cotton.

It is generally agreed that at the present basis of domestic consumption, home needs will equal or exceed last year, and the disposition of the surplus will therefore determine the price. Cotton men returning from Europe believe that stocks there are below normal and that while the tendancy just now is to buy slowly and cautiously, an increased demand will develop later. The smaller ginning figures than expected confirmed some of the private reports that have been coming in to the effect that the quantity of cotton being brought to the gins by farmers had shown an almost perpendicular decline, and that farm selling was decreasing presumably because they had no more to sell.

A New Orleans firm believes that the recent free movement has come mainly from farmers who have needed money, and now, with this distress selling completed, there are signs of a holding movement getting started. The co-operative marketing associations are storing cotton at concentration points in their respective states, anticipating a strong demand at materially higher levels from both American and foreign mills later in the season.

This firm says that, based upon the cost of production, its correspondents in the interior report that a fair average price for middling cotton would be 25 cents per pound. A well known local writer on economics says the South has been selling at the rate of about 50,000 bales per day for which it has received an average of about $100 per bale; in other words the Southern planters have been taking in approximately $30,000,000 a week. If they can continue to get 20 cents a pound for their cotton and are able to sell, say, 7,000,000 bales at this price, they will have received about $500,000,000 of cash by the first of December. The comment is made that the collection of this sum will greatly fortify their financial position and enable them to hold the balance of the crop over any temporary period of depression.

It is the opinion of a big New Orleans firm, in fact, that the farmer holds the whip handle, and as the inadequacy of the supply becomes more and more apparent, they expect to see a corresponding advance in prices. The cotton planter is reported to be rapidly liquidating his debts to the banks and merchants. Southern cotton mills are said to be buying a good deal of the Eastern belt cotton as rapidly as it comes to market, and some of them report a great increase in their business. Cotton in the Southwest has been hard to buy, and there are many indications that the bulk of the movement in that quarter is subsiding.

An interesting sidelight on the boll weevil menace is furnished in an item of news that came forward this week to the effect that a reward of $50,000 offered by the Texas legislature twenty years ago to any person who might find an effective remedy for destroying weevil, is still unclaimed. There are remedies for modifying the evil, like calcium arsenate, but no positive cure thus far, and a New Orleans man who was in the local market this week said it was quite possible that the farmer may grow discouraged in his fight against the pest and cut his acreage instead of increasing it as he did this year, in which event the result could easily be calamitous.

The American Cotton Association, in an analysis of British cotton figures published by the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers Association, comes to the conclusion that they point to an average annual consumption of about 15½ million bales in the world, which is approximately 95 percent of the best year's prewar consumption. It believes that "with the small surplus of raw merchantable cotton brought over on August 1 in this country, and the indicated shortage in production of American cotton this year, many thousands of spindles will be forced on short time within the next ten months."

1.38.1. and last mile in 2.12!!! Skyscraper's was a rattling good gallop and I like his determined finish in 32. He will make it hot for them in the Criterions. Christmas Card went a slow mile but finished in grand style. Nationalist I did not like. Salvation and Shenkoland did almost the same time 2.53.2, and the old pony, Shenko, waved his flag very pronouncedly, I believe to J.M.D. as a welcome, as he passed the stand at the finish.

Final words on Sunday boys, and tips on the day, and I hope you will not regret reading my notes which are all meant in good part.

Sores from Wrist to Elbow

"Completely Healed"

Our portrait is of Mr. John Kidd, of 17, Mill Lane, Kilmarnock, Scotland, who writes: "My right arm became covered with sores from wrist to elbow and was useless for over two years. I tried different ointments and so-called cures, but they never did me any good. Then I tried your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and the sores soon began to heal up and power began to come back to my arm, so I persevered with the Mixture, and after having four bottles am glad to say my arm is completely healed up and I have now the full use of it." In a further letter over a twelvemonth later Mr. Kidd writes: "I have had no return of my complaint; my arm is still as sound as a bell and never troubles me in the least."

CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE, by reason of its remarkable blood purifying properties, can be relied upon to give speedy relief and lasting benefit in cases of Eczema, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Boils, Pimples, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout. Shroffs Give Evidence In Mack Liquor Case

Magistrate Comments That Ownership Has Not Yet Been Shown For Goods Alleged Stolen

Other Chinese witnesses for the prosecution, one of whom was challenged by counsel for the complainant as a "hostile" witness, was adduced yesterday before Magistrate G. W. King of the British Police Court in the case wherein Mr. A. Giesel is charging A. C. Mack with theft of liquors and falsification of trademarks.

The first witness called and examined by Mr. P. W. Goldring, attorney for Giesel, was one Lee Chung-foo, formerly a shroff employed by complainant's firm.

The witness said that he was employed as a shroff on salary from February until the end of May. After that he was a broker of Giesel and Co. on commission. Mack, he said, had gone to Tientsin after he quit as a shroff and after his return there were no negotiations over the sale of liquors. He knew of an establishment on North Szechuen Road opposite the Apollo Theater Saey Shun-zung, which had dealings with the company. Whisky and other wines were sold to them.

Witness sold Saey Shun-zung a number of cases of Sunny Brook whisky at $17.50 to $18 per case on account of Giesel and Co. Ten cases which he sold the purchaser were paid for by check. He got the check himself and gave it to another broker.

CALLS WITNESS 'HOSTILE'

It was at this stage that Mr. Goldring declared the witness to be "hostile" and said that his statements varied with the original story given. He suggested that the witness had not given the check to another broker but had given it to Mack at the "Thirty Club" on Jinkee Road. Mr. Tycho Wing, for the defense, objected.

The check, the witness said, was for ten cases of Sunny Brook whisky. He did not know where the liquor came from.

Saey Shun-sung, proprietor of a provision shop on North Szechuen Road, testified that he had bought ten cases of whisky through the former witness. He paid for it on the 17th of the 7th moon—$170—giving a check on a native bank. He dealt with Lee and did not know the actual owner of the goods, nor did he inquire regarding this point.

The next witness called was Tsai Yah-li, residing in Dent Lane, who said that he was for two months a shroff for Giesel and Co.—in June and July. He was engaged by Mack, who asked him to sell Noilly Prat vermouth. Mack told him that the vermouth came from the bank and asked him to sell 229 cases in all.

STORING OF GOODS

The vermouth was first stored in the Chaoufoong Road godowns of Giesel and Co. and a few days afterward was stored in the house of the godown keeper. Mr. Li, in Yochow Road. Witness said he had sold over 100 cases but that most of it was returned. Only 9 cases were actually sold and witness collected for them. He received the money and wanted to pay it to Mack but he told witness to keep it, as Rondon had in the meantime sued witness in the French Court. Mack wanted him to keep the money for lawyer's fees.

"I wanted Mack to give me the money for lawyers' fees," said the witness, "but he told me to keep the receipts for the vermouth sold, and that we could settle later."

Some days later witness' lawyers went to the French Mixed Court, where witness was charged with forging trademarks.

"I said that I was a shroff for Giesel and Co. and that Mack asked me to sell the vermouth. I was not convicted.

"I got $1 per case commission on the sales."

SOLD FOR GIESEL

Witness said that he also sold wine for Giesel and got 1½ per cent commission. He had given evidence in the Giesel case at the French Mixed Court. The Court had inquired if there were any invoices and witness had replied that there were no invoices from Giesel or Mack. He simply made them out himself in his own name and ordinarily paid the money over to Mack.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tycho Wing, witness repeated that in the ordinary way when he got any money from anybody he paid it to Mack. He had been empolyed by the firm, on recommendation by Mr. Mack, and received a salary from the firm.

"Do you suggest that there was anything improper in Mack offering to help you out in your difficulty with the French Court?" asked Mr. Wing.

"No," replied the witness.

"When you were selling the vermouth did you know it was not proper?"

"No, I did not suspect."

"I put it to you," said Mr. Wing, "that you knew when you got $1 a case commission that it was false vermouth."

"COULD NOT ANTICIPATE"

"No," said the witness, "I could not anticipate. Mack merely informed me that it came from the bank. Mack told me the vermouth was Giesel and Company's and that he had asked the manager to pay me $1 a case commission."

On re-examination witness said that he had not asked Mack and Mack had not told him whose the vermouth was.

Mr. Goldring asked: "If you thought it was trouble of the firm, did you go to Giesel or anyone in the firm?"

"I spoke always to Mack," witness replied. "Mack said it was his business and he would arrange things for me."

At the conclusion of the hearing the Magistrate stated that the prosecution had not yet shown whose property was stolen. There was no evidence of ownership. When a man was charged with stealing, when was the prosecution going to prove that the liquor was Giesel's? There was not much evidence of conspiracy, except in the case of Battistuzzi who was a co-conspirator in that case and was not amenable in this court.

The case was adjourned until 10:30 a.m. today. It is probable that Mr. Giesel will be recalled at this morning's hearing.

LONGWORTHWAY LEAD HOUSE IF VOTERS WILL IT

Ohio Riding High In The Government; Expects New Honors

(China Press Service)

Washington, (by mail).—Unless the fickle voter decrees otherwise in November, it is entirely probable that the sovereign State of Ohio, already possessed of the Presidency and a host of other political honors, will add to its imposing array of Federal positions by taking over the Republican leadership of the next House of Representatives.

"Nick" Longworth, of Cincinnati, veteran of nearly twenty years of service in Congress, is the man. The voters can spoil plans now in the making by turning control of Congress over to the Democrats in November, or by refusing to send the husband of Alice Roosevelt back to Washington. Both of these contingencies are considered remote.

The leaders of the present Congress are gone—or going. With the exception of Speaker Gillett, of Massachusetts, most of the other principal leaders of the Sixty-seventh Congress will be missing when the roll for the Sixty-eighth is called.

Mondell, of Wyoming, is running for the Senate; Fordney, of Michigan, is retiring of his own volition; Campbell, of Kansas, was licked in the primaries; Fess, of Ohio, is running for the Senate; Walsh, of Massachusetts, has taken a judgeship; "Uncle Joe" Cannon, of Illinois, is voluntarily retiring after nearly half a century of intimate contact with the House. Others are likely to go in the primaries or in the Autumn.

The elimination of these elders has brought the question of Republican leadership in the Sixty-eighth Congress sharply to the fore.

Longworth apparently stands in the direct line of succession, although he won't be elected without a fight. Sidney Anderson, of Minnesota, arrived at the point of consideration at about the same time.

Both Anderson and Longworth are lawyers, as are 75 percent of the members of Congress. The tall Minnesotan, however, is looked upon as an agricultural representative. He was chairman of the joint committee which conducted a far-reaching investigation into agricultural conditions, and he has been a leader in the Agricultural Bloc.

Anderson is one of the younger men in the House. He will celebrate his fortieth birthday on September 17, and he is now in his twelfth year in the House, which means that he came down to Washington at the tender age of twenty-eight.

The agricultural element in the House, embracing mid-West and far-West representatives, will make a strenuous effort to have the lanky Minnesotan the leader of the next House. It is considered doubtful, however, if they can muster the votes to put him across.

"Nick" Longworth has eighteen years of Congress behind him. He is fifty-two years old and has been in Congress continually since the Fifty-eighth except for two years. He lost out in the Democratic sweep that carried Woodrow Wilson into the Presidency in 1912, but two years later he came back again and has been in Washington ever since.

Longworth has been one of the small band of men that directed the destinies of the present House. He is a member of the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

It is said of Longworth that there is no more able parliamentarian or legislative strategist in Congress. To these abilities he adds an acquaintanceship the few men in Congress possess.

BISHOP DEFENDS FLAPPER; SHE IS GOOD GIRL YET

Young Women Of Today Are No Worse Than Those Of Yesterday He Says

(China Press Service)

Portland, Ore., (by mail).—The flapper of today found a defender in Rt. Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, bishop of Missouri and presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church who is here today for the forty-seventh triennial convention of the church, which opens tomorrow.

"The young women of today do not differ greatly from those of fifty years ago," said Bishop Tuttle. "The young are not all going astray. Not a few of them are trying to make the world better for their living in it."

Stephen S. Baker, New York banker, a member of the council of the church, said he believed the majority of the people would support the government in its firm stand taken on the strike question. "I have faith that labor will, too. I do not believe that labor wants to tear down the structure of government and order."

The house of bishops, which for a week has been holding informal executive sessions, expected to finish consideration of important matters which are to be threshed out at the convention.

Deputies of the eighth provincial synod were to meet late today at St. Stephens procathedral, Bishop Herman Page of Spokane was to preside. Delegates from Spokane mission, Alaska mission, Arizona mission, California, Eastern Oregon mission, Honolulu mission, Idaho mission, Los Angeles, Nevada mission, Olympia, Oregon, the Philippines mission, Scramento, San Jaoquin and Utah mission, were to be present.

If members of the commission on prayer book revision have their views accepted, Episcopalians will no longer have read to them from the psalter scriptural passages that call for dire vengeance or a curse upon enemies of the righteous.

This was indicated today in statements made by Dr. Charles L. Slattery rector of Grace Church, New York, who has been selected to present the report to the house of deputies.

Typical verses of the psalter which the revisionists think may well be neglected are such as these:

"Let their eyes be blinded, that they see not; and ever bow down their backs."

"Pour out thine indignation upon them," and "let them fall from one wickedness into another."

Lloyd George In Row With His Party

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 31.—A quarrel is developing between the Conservatives and the National Liberals according to political correspondents.

The local Conservative Associations are angered at Mr. Lloyd George's speeches ridiculing the Government and are increasingly adopting candidates to fight the National Liberals. Mr. Lloyd George is described as infuriated and to be threatening reprisals.

The headquarters of the National Liberals claim that they can put 100 additional candidates into the field in a burning fight against the Conservatives if the National Liberals are not given a fair chance.

Mr. McCurdy has told the Northampton Liberals that he, as the Chief Whip, will refrain from sending National Liberals to oppose Independent Liberals and hoped that his example will be followed by both sections.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

November 1, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were each down ⅛d in London yesterday. The New York price declined to 67 cents and the London-New York cross rate improved to 445½.

The only change in our official quotations here today was a drop in the Franc rate to 1045.

Our market here was steady throughout the day with practically no variation in rates, there being sellers of Sterling at 3-3⅞ and buyers at 3-4.

There were sellers of Gold Dollars at 74¼ and buyers at 74⅝ for near delivery and 74½ for forward. There were sellers of Yen at 65 and buyers at 64⅞.

Banks were quoting 3-4⅛ for Sterling bills, 75¾ for Gold Dollar bills and 1090 for Franc bills. There were very few bills offering or little business of any kind passing.

China sold a small amount of silver in London yesterday and India bought. The markets closed steady. New York also report their market as steady.

Now to Keep Well in Winter

Do not let your blood get thin this winter. For people who have a tendency toward anaemia or bloodlessness, winter is a trying season.

As soon as you notice the tired feeling, lack of appetite and shortness of breath that are warning symptoms of thin blood take a short treatment with Dr. Williams' pink pills. Do not wait until the color has entirely left your cheeks, until your lips are white, your eyes dull and your ears like mother of pearl. It is so much easier to correct thinning of the blood in the earlier stages than later. Dr. Williams' pink pills build up the blood and strengthen the nerves. In this way the general health is improved, the appetite increases, the digestion is strengthened, and new ambition and energy are developed. Work becomes easier because it does not cause exhaustion.

Keep your system at its highest efficiency with Dr. Williams' pink pills, the great blood builder and nerve tonic. Your own druggist can supply you, or you can obtain the Pills direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, one bottle for $1.50, six for $8.00, post free. An instructive booklet "Hobbies and Health" will be sent to you free in response to a postcard request directed to the above address

The Soviet In Vladivostok

WITH the Japanese evacuation of Vladivostok and the occupation of that important Russian outlet to the sea by the Soviet civil officials and the Soviet army, the world witnesses the passing of one more problem foisted upon it by the Great War.

Doubtless there is rejoicing throughout the length and breadth of Russia; probably there is rejoicing, more or less tempered, in other parts of the world, for at least Siberia belongs to Russia and not to Japan.

It is to be hoped, however, that in celebrating the return to the Russian fold of Vladivostok, the Soviet Government will not be led into the arrogant mistakes of judgment which often beset the paths of conquerors. They have no right in truth to regard themselves as conquerors. They are back in Vladivostok not because they are conquerors of Japan, but because Japan, in deference to the public opinion of the world, as expressed at the Washington Conference and elsewhere, has withdrawn her forces.

In other words, the Great Powers, to which the Soviet Government continues to offer childish and unnecessary affronts, have in this important instance, and in others, proved friendly; whereas the conventional attitude of Sovietism has been that all the Great Powers were leagued against the welfare of Russia and were in a plot to enforce their combined will upon the Russian people.

There exists no doubt that mistakes have been made on all sides in recent years, both by the Powers and by Russia, but the fact remains that on the summing up Russia remains heavily indebted to the peoples which the Soviet regime continues to assail.

The most recent instances of mistaken policy on the part of Moscow are with regard to the Near East crisis and the attempt at the same time to annul the British trade concession. The latter move at first wasn't understood, but immediately it transpired that this annulment represented an effort on Lenin's part to placate France in the Near East at the expense of an affront to Great Britain. Once grasped in its fundamentals, it came to naught.

Lenin's explanation of his action, however, is still of interest. The British concession had been made in agreement between Soviet officials, fully authorised, and Mr. Urquhart, a British captain of industry. Apparently all was well. But in the middle of the Near East crisis, Lenin attempted its repudiation. He based his action on the fact that the agreement was made with the citizen of a country which "has not been behaving in a friendly manner to Soviet Russia." That, said Lenin, cannot be tolerated. Lenin must have his principles accepted or admitted before he will consider questions of trade. His decision was much to the effect that men who do not like each other personally, or who do not belong to the same political party, cannot do business together.

What the Russian dictator doubtless had partly in mind was to use Russian trade in his play for international recognition. It is not a pleasant or promising attitude. Let Russians starve and Russian industry rot rather than surrender one jot or tittle of his doctrines.

It will be well for the Russian people while they celebrate, to bear these things in mind and especially to repudiate the thought that all the world is against them. Surely the fact that the rest of the world refuses to swallow the Lenin doctrines does not prove that it hates the Russian people. On the contrary, if anything.

The house that Stebbins owned was burning; his wife and children were inside;
Smoke rolled from all the windows darkly, and Stebbins wrong his hand and cried;
His clothes were singed, his face was blistered; his knees gave way beneath his weight;
He called: "For God's sake, help! My loved ones—" his look was wild, his terror great.

Then came his neighbor, strong, courageous, and armed to fight the roaring flame;
He strove with all his might, nor halted to think of favors he might claim;
He plunged within, unchecked by danger, he took no time to count the cost:
He saved the helpless ones whom Stebbins, poor, trembling wretch, had feared were lost.

The house was damaged very badly, but not, it seemed, beyond repair;
The man who hastened to the rescue was bruised and blistered here and there;
Assured that he had done his duty, and that he might be on his way,
The rescuer departed, asking no thanks, and not expecting pay.

Then Stebbins rose and looked about him; his children and his wife were saved.
But anger filled him, and they wondered, perceiving how the man behaved.
"He's gone!" he said; "he's left us, curse him! He hasn't got no soul, he ain't!
He should have stayed to mend the windows and give the house a coat of paint."

STUFFED HAM

Two slices ham; 2 tablespoonfuls flour; 2 cupfuls stale breadcrumbs; ¾ cupful hot water; 1 egg; ¼ teaspoonful salt; ¼ teaspoonful pepper; 1½ teaspoonfuls sage; ¼ cupful chopped walnuts; 2 tablespoonfuls chopped olives; ½ cupful milk, and ½ cupful water.

Have the ham cut about ¼ inch thick, as for frying. Make a stuffing by moistening the breadcrumbs with the hot water and adding the egg, seasonings, nut meats and olives. Rub flour over one side of each slice of ham. Turn, and on the other side of each spread the stuffing generously. Roll up and skewer with toothpicks. Place in a baking dish with the milk and water and bake about one hour at 400 degrees Fahrenheit, basting frequently. Make a gravy of the juices in the pan and serve with hot apple sauce.

Ex-Packing House Worker Now Is Red Court Judge

BY ABRAHAM EPSTEIN

(Former Secretary of the Pennsylvania Labor Education Committee.)

From a Kansas City packing house to a Judge's bench in Moscow, with the power to inflict death sentences, frequently executed within a few hours, seems a long, long way, but revolutions are the creators of careers and talents. They are the mothers of strange children. John Kotick has made this record broad-jump in but a few years.

I met him last February in the Moscow Revolutionary Tribunal—the terror of all anti-Bolshevist elements. These quarters are located in a dilapidated old building on Main Lublianskia. The stairs groaned protests as I mounted them. Plaster sagged from the walls and the damp, low ceilings. At both ends of the dim and smoky hallway sleepy soldiers with sinister guns lazily stretched forth hands for the "propusk," or permit to go upstairs. These permits, while always essential for admission, are obtained without difficulty.

I had noticed this young Judge, with his thick black hair, deep brown eyes and rather freckled face, on the previous day. He was dressed in an American made coat of good yellow leather, and his whole appearance suggested the Yankee rather than a Soviet official. He was one of the three Judges at the trial of eleven girls and three men who were charged with having sold a number of railroad permits while at work in a Government office. They were accused of having received the munificent sum of 80,000 rubles in the spring of the previous year (about $2 at that time). This they divided among the fourteen.

The three Judges were seated on the platform, which is covered with a red flag. Their garb was simple, and they looked like typical workmen. The court room was dark and damp, the floor wet from the snow which was melting from the shoes of the visitors. The walls, badly in need of a coat of paint, were covered with posters, placards and appeals. The room was filled with onlookers and friends of the accused. All had their hats on.

On the stand was an exceedingly attractive young girl. She wore a short but simple gray dress. Her long blond hair hung in two heavy braids, which reached almost below her knees. She looked scarcely more than sixteen, and it was difficult to convince one's self that this charming creature was charged with a crime. One could not resist the reflection that but for the tragic conditions, she would have been laughing and dancing at this time.

I looked into the faces of the other prisoners. Most of them were young girls who, not in court, would be bursting with laughter. They were apparently just as much surprised as I was to find themselves accused as grafters, counter revolutionists and thieves. They admitted that they had accepted pay for the issuing of permits, but they were hardly conscious that this was a crime. Were not the Judges aware that this was the usual practice, and that scarcely any one could get a ticket otherwise? Was not this the practice in practically all Government offices, and were not all Communist leaders, from Lenin down, aware that this was the case? How could it be otherwise? Most of them had families they helped to support. The Government was either not paying them at all, or was not supplying them with even the commonest necessities in time. How could they resist the temptation, they contended, when bribing was common practice and grafting accepted as a custom?

BOUGHT A POWDER PUFF

These unfortunate people, however, had been caught, and an example had to be made of them. I was impressed with the cool and keen examination of Judge Kotick. He listened unmoved to the stories of the girls, all of whom had spent seven or eight months in prison while awaiting trial. Their tale was pitiable, though doubtless one often repeated in that land of agony. Only one girl, it was disclosed, used her share of the money for the purchase of face powder. Judge Kotick became indignant and asked how she could do that. To which the girl rejoined that "a girl must keep her nose powdered." This brought a laugh throughout that damp and dingy court room which even the stern Judges could not fore-stall. I was happy to learn later that these young people had been acquitted. They were all workers. They had already spent some time in prison, which was considered punishment enough.

In the hope of learning something further of the psychology and methods of the members of Russia's leading revolutionary tribunal, I returned to the office of the presidium the next day. Judge Kotick was lounging on the only sofa in the room, which boasted a red plush cover not yet in tatters. I later discovered that this remarkably preserved couch performed valuable night service for Moscow's leading court. I had been in the room but a few minutes when I heard one of the Judges say, "Why don't you speak to him in English, John? Show us that you can." Then in rather broken English, Mr. Kotick told me that he was one of the many returned emigrants from the United States. He invited me to his home after I asked him to tell me more about himself, and naturally I accepted the invitation gladly.

A few days later I went to his "home" on Rozhdestvenskia. By that time I had had bitter experiences with Moscow's housing problem. I had been without any place to sleep for a week. Finally, when I did find a place by all sorts of seemingly underhand methods, I was compelled to pay such an exorbitant price that I found myself broke in a short time and obliged to look for other quarters. I had to be officially registered as living in one room with an "aunt"—when I lived in a private room, rented from a former aristocratic lady who managed to keep an apartment of four rooms and have three more such "nephews." I expected to find my host, a member of the highest court in Moscow, and consequently the most important in all Russia, decently housed. Did I not find many officials occupying two and three rooms in the "Soviet houses"? These were leading hotels which had been converted into quarters for Government officials, and were unusually clean and well furnished in comparison with the Moscow standards of today.

IN SQUALID QUARTERS

At the end of a long, dark narrow hall I found a dirty and snow-wet stairway, such as can be seen only in Moscow. I thought I was in the wrong place. "No Judge would live in such a hole," I thought to myself. This has obviously been a very cheap house. I inquired again from the watchman and was reassured that "Comrade Kotick lives in No. 128." I walked on and on, endlessly it seemed, guided by one electric light in the far distance. The floor creaked ominously, and on both sides of me the dim outline of shadowy doors suggested the manifold cells of a prison.

My surprise was hardly relieved when I found myself at last inside room No. 128. It was very small, perhaps six by ten, and certainly no more than seven feet high. It was stuffy and lighted by a small arc light which revealed an old iron bed with clean bedding, a table and two wooden chairs. In one corner was a stove, smoking badly, as is too often the case in Russia. Here a rather goodlooking woman was preparing some food. Perched on the edge of the bed were two of Mr. Kotick's friends, also returned Russian-American emigrants.

I was offered one of the two available chairs while my host related to me the story of his accomplishments. The young woman continued to busy herself at the stove, stealing an occasional glance at the narrator. There was no space on the overcrowded table, so I jotted down a few notes in my book, balanced on my knee.

Judge Kotick said he was single, twenty-seven years of age and born in Grodno, Russia, which is now Polish territory. He went through the People's School in Russia. In 1913 he came to the United States and went to Kansas city where he worked in a packing house. He was employed there about six months, and then went to work on a farm where he earned $20 a month and board. Later he went to Cleveland and worked in a foundry for about three years, earning from $2.50 to $3 per day. After that he worked in Detroit as a helper with the Great Lakes Shipping Company, earning about 50 cents an hour. While in the United States, he said, he could find no time to study.

Kotick left the United States in October, 1920. He was a member of the Communist Party in Detroit where he said he took an active part. He explained his reason for going back, saying that "Russia is the land of the free and the workers." Immediately upon his arrival in Russia he did some work with the returned emigrants and in October was elected a member of the Moscow Revolutionary Tribunal by the Moscow Provincial Soviet.

Kotick frankly admitted that he had no legal training or experience whatsoever. I asked what his concept of justice was. He replied without hesitation: "In capitalistic countries Judges favor the rich. The workers' Justices base their judgment only upon the facts." He went on to say that as he was Judge of the Revolutionary Tribunal—where only cases of anti-government character are tried—he must always pay special attention to the revolutionary significance of the case and its dangers to the Government. He said the Judges familiarise themselves with each case before it comes up for trial. They usually ask questions of the defendants and witnesses and act as both Prosecutors and Judges.

"Do you follow definite laws and regulations in determining judgment?" I asked.

"Where could we get all such laws and regulations?" returned Judge Kotick, with another question. "We are young and we had other things to do besides making statute books. During the first few years the revolutionary tribunals were guided only by their own conscience and revolutionary expediency. Now we generally follow the instructions of the Commissariat of Justice."

"How would you compare the procedure of your courts as compared with those of the States?" I inquired further.

"Our courts," replied Judge Kotick slowly, "are proletarian courts. They are run by the workers and peasants for the protection of the revolution. They are fundamentally different from those in the United States. The advantage of our courts is that no lawyers' fees are necessary. Each is given a fair trial and every defendant can act as his own attorney."

The Judge admitted that the work was difficult, but declared that he felt no regret when rendering decisions. "A Communist cannot tremble," he declared in a deliberative manner. "He acts on his convictions and on what he believes is good for the revolution. When that is done, he fears no one. But," concluded the Judge with a smile on his lips, "I assure you it's no easy job."

I asked him why he did not try to get a better room, for, after all, we both knew that with some pull one could get a fairly decent room to live in even in Moscow. Judge Kotick admitted that had he really tried hard he could have got a better place. He said though that at this time he did not want to press for a better room because as a Communist he must set an example and not take up the best rooms as so many were already doing. Furthermore, he told me, than the Chairman of the three Judges at the trial mentioned above had no room whatsoever, and slept on the red couch in the office of the Revolutionary Tribunal.

"When Russia gets richer our Judges also shall have better rooms," he remarked.

The Great Question---What Is Time?

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest

Few facts relating to astronomy appeal more powerfully to the imagination than, viz: that the light we receive from distant stars, which may be hundreds or thousands of years traversing the space that separates us from those stars, only gives us a record of the appearance that they presented at the time when it left their surfaces. For instance, suppose the star to be a thousand light-years distant; then, we upon the earth must always see that star, not as it is or where it is, at the moment of observation, but as, and where, it was a thousand years before.

So a history of the stars based upon observations made from the earth is necessarily, and continuously, centuries, or millenia, behind-time. The timestamp borne by every light-wave, denoting its moment of departure, resembles the postoffice stamp on a letter. A letter can only describe events up to the moment that it is written; so a light-wave, being periodic and successive in its nature, carries only the impressions of the instant when it left its source. Its immediate follower in the endless chain tells what visually occurred at the source about one 589-billionth of a second later, and so on.

But if the star is 1,000 light-years away there will be a chain of 18,587 sextillions of light-waves stretched across the intervening space, and each of these in succession enters the observer's eyes a thousand years after it left the star. That gap of a thousand years in the star's history, terrestrial observation can never fill, unless the star should suddenly cease to exist, in which case observers on the earth would notice the disappearance a millenium after it had actually ceased to shine; but that wait of a thousand years for the news they could in no way avoid.

Now, this unquestioned principle has been used as an illustration to prove that time is not an invariable standard of duration, but varies with the velocity of the observer, the word "velocity" being used in its scientific sense, which includes direction as well as speed. Thus a correspondent, Milton Efros, writes:

"If one were to move faster than light, and in the same direction, as he passed the light that had gone on before him the scenes would reverse themselves. Thus if he left the earth in 1922 and went three times as fast as light, wouldn't it seem to him, after a year's time, that events that happened in 1922 were being repeated, and in the reverse order that they happened in?

"If this is true, then time is only the name of the succession of events seeming to go at a uniform pace, the succession of events being like a long, moving line on which it is possible to travel forward, backward or with time because we are remaining stationary as light passes us. If this is true, and a person were to leave the earth moving three times as fast as light having in one year's time gone to some distant star and returned, the light only just reaching the star would have only progressed about four months on the earth while it would have seemed to be a year to him?"

This is fairly representative of much of the speculative and imaginative thinking and reasoning that has been based upon the old principle of relativity since Einstein centered universal attention upon it by the wonderful mathematical development that he gave to it. Such things, however, though having a fascination of their own do not truly exemplify Einstein's theory.

It seems sufficient to say with regard to the paradox of the apparent reversal, or shortening or lengthening of time, based on the velocity of light, that time is not determined, or affected, by the motion of light. There is no physical proof of any such relationship.

If a man could go to a star a million light-years distant and return in one minute the sixty or seventy beats of his heart that had occurred in the interval would assure him, if he had any crazy doubt about it, that time had kept its regular pace during his astonishing excursion.

If an astronomer on a world 133 light-years distant could now see Paris with his telescope he would behold some of the awful scenes of the French Revolution taking place—but that would not change the real time of the occurrence of those scenes. His messengers would have arrived with their pictures 133 years after the events occurred; that is all.

It is fortunate that Newton lived long before the jungle of relativity began to interest mathematicians, for otherwise perhaps there would now have been not even ten men in the world who could understand the laws of physics.

The Psychological Novel

Some readers will doubtless hail the statement by Mr. W. L. George that the vogue of the psychological novel is about over. His evidence for this belief is, it must be confessed, rather meagre, says an exchange. It consists mainly in his discovery that he himself is very tired of that kind of novel, and has resolved never to write another one of the sort himself. He does go on to argue that the psychological novel is "out of touch with the vivid activity of the men and women of today." This looks like a lunch back to the romance of adventure, and above all to stirring plots. Mr. George says that people have lost interest in being asked to observe a man sitting in an armchair reciting involved thoughts about the universe, and demand that he be shown getting up and going to work. The psychological novel according to this writer, who now promises to bring forth works meet for repentance, has been filled with tedious trivialities to the point of becoming horribly dull. He thinks that a new mode is coming in of dynamic energy and bustling achievement.

All this is slightly amusing and not very convincing to those who have watched the coming and going of fashions in novels. There has never been at any one time a fixed form in which all novelists write. Their methods, their "schools," continually clash and overlap. Mr. George says that he confirmed himself in his purpose to write again in the grand, bouncing manner by reading some of the old novelists—Thackeray, Howells, De Maupassant. But had those shepherds no psychology in them? Was Henry James always frolicking in outward events? One distrusts those hard-and-fast classifications.

Perhaps what Mr. George really means is the psycho-analyst novel. Its going would be speeded by most people without a tear. Enough has been done in explaining unimportant and uninteresting and even repellent characters in fiction by the terms of Freud and Jung. The thing has been carried to such an excess as to provoke reaction. There is a limit beyond which the human mind, even that of a voracious and indiscriminate novel-reader, cannot go. Reports are current that the "Ulysses" of James Joyce has been the finishing touch for many readers. If this is the abyss into which psycho-analysis is driving the novel, they want no more of it from this day forth.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician knowing of what it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"I have frequently prescribed Castoria for common ailments of children with good results."
W. A. CRANDALL, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I find your Castoria is very beneficial in the treatment of children's ailments."
F. DAVIS, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

"As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine and, aside from my own family experience, I have, in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."
WM. J. MCCRANN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I object to what are called patent medicines, where the maker alone knows what stuff is put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use in proper cases. I judge it to be a very useful, as well as harmless family medicine."
N. B. SIEBY, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

F. E. REPUBLIC TO BE TAKEN OVER BY SOVIET, IS HINT

General Uborevitch Says "Popular Will Will Decide

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Oct. 30.—A Vladivostok telegram of today's date reports an interview with General Uborevitch, Commander of the Chita forces, who made the following statement:

"The future political organisation is to be decided upon according to popular will by taking into consideration the views to be expressed by public bodies of all descriptions. If, therefore, the request of the populace is to unite Soviet Russia with the Far Eastern Republic, it is not improbable that the latter will be done away with and embodied in Soviet Russia.

"Russian laborers are not pleased to note that many warships of foreign Powers are staying in the harbor of Vladivostock, notwithstanding the fact that the Chita forces are proving that they are able to maintain peace and order as well as protect lives and property of foreigners.

"The general tendency in Vladivostock is that while the bourgeoisie are desirous of the continuance of the Far Eastern Republic, the labor classes are inclined to the annexation of the Republic by Soviet Russia.

Half Of Foochow Stores Re-opened

(China Press Correspondence)

Foochow, Oct. 30.—Foreigners in the port have not been molested, but looting has been quite general and the pawn shops are reaping a fortune. The Chinese banks are still closed and the money market is very tight and this makes an increased quantity of business for the foreign banks. About one half of the stores have opened and resumed business.

On the surface the political situation is quiet but the undercurrents which are working, if half the rumors take effect, will cause an eruption that will compare well with Vesuvius. Admiral Sah is pouring oil upon the troubled waters. There is still some fighting up the river as wounded soldiers are being brought into the hospitals quite frequently.

Is "Baby Veteran" Of Civil War

CHARLES H. Hilles, of Cincinnati, O., is believed to be the youngest living veteran of the Civil War. He is ten months younger than Warren G. Second, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who heretofore had held that honor. Mr. Hilles was the guest of honor at the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic when it met in Des Moines, Iowa.

Nanking Ass'n Has Autumn Meeting

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, Oct. 28.—The Oct. meeting of the Nanking Association was held last evening in the Community Center, when over 200 local residents and visitors had a chance to get together,—the first opportunity since the Summer vacation.

After a short business meeting, a most enjoyable musical program was given. Mrs. Paul D. Twinem rendered two warmly received piano solos and Mrs. Harry Kingman and Mr. William Blackstone delighted the audience with vocal solos. The rest of the evening was spent in an informal manner, when the new arrivals in the city were given a chance to meet the older residents.

The Association is fortunate in being able to hold its gatherings in the Community Center, a building erected by the Milton Stewart Evangelistic Fund, in which meetings of a religious and social nature are to be held. The delightfully appointed room contributed a great deal to the spirit of sociability that marked last evening's meeting, and it is to be hoped that succeeding meetings, to be held in the Community Center and the Nanking Club, will go even further in bringing together the widely scattered residents in the city and in Hsiakwan.

Head Of British Industries Board Sees Trade Revival

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 31.—In the course of a speech at the Federation of British Industries at Edinburgh Colonel O. C. Armstrong, the President, expressed the opinion that a possible revival of trade was in sight.

He urged readjustment of the reparations claims and advocated a round-table conference with a view to a prompt and reasonable compromise. The situation was so serious that immediate drastic action was necessary.

He referred to the retarding influence of hostile tariff barriers and suggested that British manufacturers should look outside of Europe, for example, South America and the Far East.

Colonel Armstrong said that German competition was becoming weak as her financial position became worse while the United States' policy with regard to tariffs and inter-Allied debts would react considerably upon her power to compete in external markets.

Kansu Schools To Teach Industries

(China Press Correspondence)

Kuyuan, Kansu, Oct. 16.—Since last writing you we have had some various enterprises opened by the magistrate, Mr. Hsieh Yu, a native of Anhuei. He has established two industrial schools, one in the city and the other in the Suburb, where students are taught to knit socks, caps, and gloves. As the quality of the work is fairly good the sales are accordingly, the prices not being exorbitant, either. He has recently bought a machine on which finer yarn can be spun, both sheep wool, as well as camel hair. Rugs of all sizes are also woven here.

He is a man who is well liked by the people, as he is very just and square in his dealings with them, whether Mohammedans or "Han ren." There is no discrimination. Forty li west of the city is a large lake which empties its waters into a river going toward Haiyuanhsien. But since Mr. Hsieh came he has had some of it come into the city which makes it beneficial to all concerned. This was not a little bit of an undertaking, since the earthquake of December 1920 changed the course of the stream. In former days the military had charge of this waterway. But now it is in his hands entirely.

The various schools in this district are also on a better footing, due to his zeal for education for both sexes. Just a week or so ago we were invited, to the opening of the new Girls' School here in the city. The former premises were at the home of the lady principal, but as some of the inconveniences made it impossible for some of the bigger girls to attend, Mr. Hsieh had a better piece of property purchased and a new building erected, and which property is a great boon to the city.

He is interested in getting things done for the benefit of the people, and we trust that he will be permitted to stay on for some time in order to accomplish what he has begun.

QUAKE IN KANSU

(China Press Correspondence)

Kuyuan, Kansu, Oct. 18.—On the evening of August 30 we had a very strong earthquake shock which scared every one of us. It was the strongest one since the fatal one of Dec 20, 1920. We have been trying ever since to find out if there was any material damage or loss of life resulting from this last quake. In the country round about walls are said to have fallen down, but none hurt.

Four days' north of us, at a place called Pankeocheng, we hoard that quite a few score were killed, and a good deal of damage, but we can not verify these reports owing to pressure of business here which hinders our going to see for ourselves. But, it can be assured, if it was as bad as this we should surely have heard more about it.

CROPS GOOD

(China Press Correspondence)

Kuyuan, Kausu, Oct. 11.—The harvests have been very good this year in these regions, making the people happy over the prospects that they need not starve this coming Winter, though the prices have not been reduced as we expected. Wheat, oats, peas, buckwheat, millet, and maize are the best staples harvested.

Plans New Loan On Postal Increases

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 29.—The Chinese Press reports that Mr. Kao Eng-hung contemplates the issue of a loan of $60,000,000, secured on the increased telegraph and postal charges. The papers say that the loan will be termed "The Railway Salvation Loan." It will carry eight percent interest and the period will be four years.

The proceeds will be used for the payment of interest and capital of foreign obligations on the railways falling due in 1923.

The scheme will be referred to the Cabinet for discussion shortly.

Michael Collins's Kin Expected Murder

"IF it was a real Irishman who killed Mike I would say the Irish race stands discredited. But I know it wasn't. It was some dirty blackguard not fit to wipe his boots!" This was the comment of Police Sergeant Pat Collins, of the Chicago Police Department, a brother of the martyred leader. "This is an awful blow, but we expected it. Three weeks ago he wrote me that he was in danger, but that if he was killed it would be fighting for Ireland." Sergeant Collins declared his brother was only thirty-one, though all previous reports placed his age at forty. Sergeant Collins had not seen his famous brother since they were children.

Trade Outlook Dull, Norwegian Shippers Report

(China Press Service)

Christiania, October 24.—Norwegian shipowners, who had a meeting here last week, found the outlook for their industry unpromising. The former premier, A. G. Knudsen, who is a shipowner, said he foresaw a continuation of the world depression for five years more unless the great international questions were quickly settled.

The primary cause of the bad situation in Norwegian shipping is the fact that the 1,250,000 tons sunk by German submarines were replaced mostly in Great Britain at boom prices, and the present low freight rates make it impossible to pay interest on the capitalisation. Another cause is the poverty of Eastern Europe which prevents the people there from importing much. Still another cause is the retaliation against Norwegian prohibition which led to the complete cessation of Norwegian exports to Spain, Portugal, and their colonies.

Of the Norwegian merchant marine of 2,500,000 tons—the largest per capita in the world—nearly all the sailing vessels and about 300,000 tons of steamships are unemployed. Only one-fifth of Norway's tonnage is normally used for Norwegian exports; the remainder plies between foreign ports. Consequently the worlds' general trade depression is a serious blow to Norway's prosperity. There are many unemployed and their number is expected to increase during the winter. Bergen, which is an important shipping center, has charity bazaars for the children of the unemployed. Mayor Ameln says the tax receipts have decreased greatly since last year.

The new American tariff is regarded in business circles here as adding to the economic difficulties of Norway and of all Europe.

School Cornerstone Is Laid At Peking

DR. FERGUSON TALKS ON TAOISM AT PEKING CLUB

Three Distinct Stages In Chinese Religion, He Says

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, Oct. 28.—The monthly meeting of the Things Chinese Society was held Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the drawing room of Lady Aglen's home. Dr. Leighton Stuart acted, as chairman and introduced the speaker, Dr. John C. Ferguson, whose subject was Taoism. In part Doctor Ferguson said:

There are three distinct stages of Taoism. The first of these which may be called the ethical, can be dated conveniently as having begun with Lao Tzu and his writings which are included in the Tao Teh King. This was the stage of philosophic discussion, commencing about the close of the sixth century B. C.

The second stage or the magical, as it may be classed, commenced in the first century of the Christian era and is centered around the personality of Chang Tao-ling. He retired to seclusion in the mountains of western China and devoted himself to the study of alchemy and, to the cultivation of purity by means of mental abstraction.

Here he was sought out by large numbers of disciples who paid him five pecks of rice a day for their keep from which his teaching became known as the Wu Tou Mi Tao, the "Doctrine of Five Pecks of Rice." This congregation of Chang's disciples was the first stirring of the movement which later was organised into a religion.

Chang called himself "Celestial Teacher"—t'ien shih. This was a term used by Chuang Tzu who states that it was conferred upon a youth of Hsiang Ch'eng by the Yellow Emperor. According to the Su Wen it was also given to Ch'i Po, one of the assistants of the Yellow Emperor who is known as the founder of the art of healing.

This was the stage of development of magical arts and was based upon the mysteries of the Book of Changes rather than upon the ethical teachings of Lao Tzu.

The third stage, that of an organised religion, came in the seventh century, during the reign of the illustrious founder of the T'ang dynasty, Li Shih-ming, whose dynastic title is T'ai Tsung. Profoundly influenced by the tradition that the family name of Lao Tzu was Li, and that this was his own patronymic, T'ai Tsung lent his influence to the establishment of Taoism as a religion on the same basis as the flourishing Buddhistic religion in whose mysteries he was also a profound believer. According to Fen Yen Chien Wen Chi, T'ai Tsung claimed Lao Tzu as the progenitor of his branch of the Li family.

The relation of Taoism to Buddhism was sketched as well as the influence of the Book of Changes upon Taoist teaching. In reference to the Tao Teh King the lecturer said. "It has only a forced relationship to the Taoist religion of the T'ang dynasty, which may be justly compared to the forced relationship which Li Shih-min, T'ai Tsung of the T'ang dynasty claimed with Li Erh, Lao Tzu, whose sayings are found in the Tao Teh King."

The strong nationalistic strain in Taoism was pointed out and its conformity to ancient traditions. The lecturer discussed at length the Taoistic cosmological theories, both in their literary and popular interpretations. The last part of the lecture was devoted to a description of supernatural beings to which worship is paid by Taoists.
